Tendrils Natural Hair Salon Using "Sense and Sensuality" to Celebrate Mind, Body & Spirit

BROOKLYN, New York—January 28, 2005—In a culture that seems to overemphasize the "importance" of being a size zero or "sexy" while practically still in diapers, a Brooklyn salon is instead bringing the focus back to a beautiful mind, body and spirit.

On Monday, February 28, 2005 from 6 - 9pm, Tendrils Wellness Salon for Natural Hair Care introduces a free "Sense and Sensuality" Open House, held at Cynergy Spa (87 Fort Greene Place, btwn. Fulton St. & DeKalb Ave. in Brooklyn, NY).

The open house session will kick off the "Sense and Sensuality" Workshop Series (labeled as a "celebration of love and cultural diversity" by Tendrils owner Diane Bailey), and will introduce the various workshops, discussions and moderators being featured during the event. "Our workshops will center around real beauty, which is the blending of body, mind and spirit," says Tendrils manager and workshop organizer Deena Collins.

Dates/times for the workshops ($25 each) will be announced during the open house, and refreshments will be served. The first 50 people to register with payment will receive a $5 Tendrils gift certificate towards salon services.

Guest speakers will include fitness trainer Jennifer Hunter, clinical psychologist and life coach Cynthia Grace, Ph.D--and Collins, who is also a certified Reiki master/teacher.

"Just because you don't have blonde hair & blue eyes or are a size two doesn't mean you're not beautiful," says Tendrils founder/owner Diane Bailey, whose styling work has appeared in various magazines. "We're trying to redefine what's beautiful--the integration of one's whole self."
